COURSE DESCRIPTION

A study of the major issues in the philosophy of religion such as the existence and nature of God, the relationships between faith and reason, the nature of religious language, religious experience, and the problem of evil.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Upon successful completion of this course students will be able to:

1. Read, analyze, and critique texts in the philosophy of religion.
2. Demonstrate knowledge of major arguments, problems, and terminology in the philosophy.
3. Articulate key concepts and issues in the philosophy of religion—such as the relationship between philosophy and religion; arguments for or against the existence of God; the personal and social responsibility of living in a diverse world; evil and suffering related to a concept of God; religious belief and morality; the relationships among science, religion, and evolution; the nature and validity of religious experience; and the nature and validity of miracles of the supernatural in religious experience.
4. relationships among science, religion, and evolution;
5. Write logically persuasive assessments of key concepts and issues.
6. Discuss the nature and validity of miracles of the supernatural in religious experience.
7. Prepare an annotated bibliography for a literature review based on a topic of interest related to the philosophy of religion.
8. Students will demonstrate personal responsibility by citing all sources properly, writing without plagiarism, and doing independent work.

ACADEMIC DISHONESTY

Plagiarism is defined as the appropriation, buying, receiving as a gift, or obtaining by any means another's work and the unacknowledged submission or incorporation of it in one's own written work offered for credit. A student commits plagiarism if he/she:

- 1. fails to acknowledge the sources of any information in a paper which is not either common knowledge or personal knowledge. A student can acknowledge a source through in-text citations, attribution lines, footnotes, or other forms of documentation approved by the instructor. (Common knowledge is the basic information within a field or discipline, as well as most historical dates and facts, and many ordinary observations.)
- 2. fails to acknowledge direct quotation either by using quotation marks or (for longer passages) indentation. Without the quotation marks or indentation, passages copied directly from a source might be considered plagiarized even if it is followed by an in-text citation or a footnote. The citation or footnote acknowledges that there is a source, but it does not indicate that the writer has borrowed someone else's exact words. If a writer uses the language of a source, word-for word, he/she must use quotation marks or block indentation.
- 3. merely paraphrases the original words of the source. Some students think they can avoid a charge of plagiarism by changing a few words in each sentence they copy or by rearranging the shape of phrases or the order of sentences in a paragraph. This is not true. When taking notes students must be careful to put ideas in their own words or to use direct quotations when relying on phrases directly borrowed from a source.
- 4. borrows the ideas, examples, or structure of the source without acknowledging it. A student can be guilty of plagiarism if he/she systematically borrows the ideas and organization of a source even if the language of the piece is on a major news event by using exactly the same ideas in the same order as they appear in an article in any popular news magazine.
- 5. takes, buys, or receives a paper written by someone else and presents it as the student's own.
- 6. uses one paper for two different courses, or re-uses a paper previously submitted for credit, without the prior approval of the instructor or instructors.

Plagiarism will result in a failing grade on that assignment. A second plagiarized paper may result in an F for the course.
